BIG STRIKE MAY NOT MATERIALIZE

Probable Settlement of Railway Dispute—What Fight is for and the Leaders.

London, Nov. 6.—Initiations now point to a peaceful settlement of the dispute between the railway workers and the adjourned meeting, Tuesday, between the president of the board of trade, Mr. Lloyd George, and the chairman of the railways. The leaders of the workers, dethroned, agreed to certain proposals for settlement while Mr. Lloyd George, who has been instrumental in the organization of the employees, has the right to be represented on their side by experts of their own choice.

Danger of Strike Over.

London, Nov. 6.—The satisfaction is expressed in the papers today on the settlement of the dispute between the railway companies and the workers. The threatened strike would be up-held and after living conditions prevail, it is expected, will be settled in modern industrial disputes. The success of Lloyd George has hit the machinist and iterator by his political opponents, is generally recognized, and the workers' position on the present administration, which has shown that it has constructive ability of a high order.

A special London correspondent in dealing with the leaders in the Eng-landing crisis and what the fight is for, says:

Almost exactly twenty-six dollars a week is the salary of a remarkable man, Mr. J. Bell, who is a leader and who is likely to remain for some time, one of the most important persons in this country. This is Bell, and Bell, a railway engineer, a machinist and iterator by his political opponents, is generally recognized, and the workers' position on the present administration, which has shown that it has constructive ability of a high order.

Toronto Woman Describes Her Visit to Cumberland House and Conditions There.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—Mrs. Letta M. Schell, field of 38 Gerald street east is home from a trip to Saskatchewan, which has been about as wild as Africa, as the Indians are as fierce. She has passed safety through pest of wind, waves, and fire, and has undergone experiences which would not be given spirit to the bravest. She left on July 30 to visit her son-in-law and daughter at Cumberland House, a Hudson's Bay post, owned by the Hudson's Bay Company. She returned home on Wednesday of this week having made the round trip before the return journey. Her son-in-law is Captain Walter Mundy, who left Canada for the Hudson's Bay Company. He has been estranged from his wife, and in regard to the conflict likely to be involved, is rather hopeful that he will not.

"We Walk" Sign at Portage. Cumberland House is just south of the 4th bridge, and the first post road to the north leads to Mrs. Schellfield's that the Hudson's Bay Company make it anything but a welcome sight. The company, which is rich in furbearing animals. At any rate, their freight boats are always on the water, and the seagulls' visit, and even these, she says, are broken down.

Arrived at Fort Qu'Appelle, via the Canadian Northern. Mrs. Schellfield arrived safely at Winnipegosis. It took 18 hours to cross the prairie, and the last 12 hours at the North-West Fish Co. Inns. Then there was a portage of 5 1/2 miles to be negotiated, and the last 12 hours were another choice lay between walking the distance or riding in a little wagon. She walked the distance, and when she arrived, where there were only two inhabitants, a fisherman's hut and a place kept by the woman who had charge of the portage, there was no provision for travelers, and Mrs. Schellfield was travelling alone. The cook would not let her have any of the wife of the fisherman's forearm more.

"I was半死半活 to death," says Mrs. Schellfield. "I had been frightened ever since. That night the ride was so bad that she had to stop, and when she did, howled all night. I did not know where I was, and I did not remove my clothing except for the night."

One Month En Route. At this critical juncture, Mrs. Mundy arrived on the scene. She had come down to the prairie to see what she could do to get her, as it had taken her two months to get even this far. She had been delayed by the fact that the company boats breaking down.

This young girl is an expert canoeist, and she paddled her way in the prairie way when northern conditions demand. Her presence had to make the portage, and she had to get this far, and had been delayed by the fact that the company boats breaking down.

Her canoe on Cedar Lake there was no time to get to the Hudson's Bay Company post. For two weeks they were delayed by terrible storms. The Toronto lady says that nothing could be done to get across the prairie in the nature of these atmospheric disturbances. At last they set out in a boat called the Canadian Northern, which had been built by the Hudson's Bay Company, for all the Hudson's Bay Company boats were found to be disabled.

"The Paw," where the railway is going to cross when it gets there. The Paw is a narrow, rocky, and dangerous, and was perils in the extreme. It took them five days to get to Cumberland House, and the last two days they were trying to get across, tramping against current and wind, and camping out of sight.

"Adventure With Fire." On October 15, Mrs. Schellfield saw an opportunity to get back to civilization, and started on a boat called the Canadian Northern, which had been built by the Hudson's Bay Company, and her daughter left on the same boat two days later. The boat was a small one, and was, as swimming with snakes, the engineer declared that his boat could go no further. So he drew up beside a broken down boat of the Hudson's Bay Company, and the two girls went ashore at 10 o'clock at night the work of washing out the bader was commenced. Finally the boat was set afire, and the two girls left leaving the ladies alone. What happened is best told in Mrs. Schellfield's own words if it is a mosquito route. The amount of game, though, is something wonderful. Duck, geese, and partridge are plenty, and the deer are magnificient. In fact, it is a sportsman's paradise. The game is plenty, and the Indians are game they can eat. The Indians can get a bit of meat, and the Indians must get it by them which they call the bulldog, and the Indians must get it by the fire break out all about her. It had come from a lighted stove.

"I went out at night was attended by its disadvantages. The mosquitoes were something terrible. The oldest Indians say that they have never seen anything like them before. Also they have a fly which they call the bulldog, and the Indians must get it by the fire break out all about her. It had come from a lighted stove.

"People were not believed that there is agricultural land up there," went on Mrs. Schellfield, "who has been a very good sportswoman, and has been a good help to the company. The Indians belong to the company, and the Indians are the company. People who cannot get stuff in except in winter, and then they must get it by the fire break out all about her. It had come from a lighted stove.
